DO YOU CARE TO KNOW OF THE MARVELOUS DEVELOPMENT NOW GOING ON IN

The Great Central South?

OF INNUMERABLE OPPORTUNITIES FOR YOUNG MEN OR OLD ONES—TO GROW RICH.

Do you want to know about rich farming lands, fertile, well located, on a Trunk Line Railroad, which will produce two, three and four crops from the same field each year, and which can be purchased at very low prices and on easy terms? About stock raising, where the extreme of winter feeding is but a short season? Of places where truck growing and fruit raising yield enormous returns each year? Of a place where you can live out of doors every day in the year? Of opportunities for establishing profitable manufacturing industries? Of rich mineral locations, and splendid business openings?

If you want to know the details of any or all of these, write me. I will gladly advise you fully and truthfully.

OKLAHOMA BUFFALO RANCH

Success of "Pawnee Bill" in Raising the Nearly Extirpated Animals.

Some three or four years ago Pawnee Bill bought up all the loose buffalo obtainable and declared that he would raise buffalo meat for the market. The buffalo ranch has been a success, as there is now a large bunch of as fine young buffalo as ever was seen being cornfed, and they will be slaughtered and shipped east for the holiday trade, reports the Pawnee Courier-Dispatch.

An experiment of crossing the buffalo with Galloway cattle will be made, which should bring an animal far surpassing the genuine buffalo, as the Galloway animal is of itself very handsome, with a long silky coat and a kindly disposition, which should temper the fiery disposition of the genuine buffalo, as well as improve the color of the robe. The average price per pound of buffalo meat is about $1.25—the loin and short ribs bringing $1.50 per pound—while the plate and stew bring one dollar. The robe brings $75; the head, when mounted, readily brings $75 to $150 each, according to size and quality. Both the heads and robes are very handsome when taken at this season of the year, as they then have their heavy winter coat.

Oklahoma in years past was the paradise of the buffalo. Here is where the heaviest growths of buffalo grass are found which to the buffalo is equal to the richest timothy to our domestic animals. Pawnee Bill's ranch lies in the heart of this excellent range, and he has proved beyond a doubt that the buffalo can be raised for slaughter at a profit.

WORST OF THE BURDEN.

This Tired Woman Was Obligated to Run Her Husband as Well as the Farm.

"I was recently riding along a hot, dusty road," said a cyclist according to the New York Press, "and becoming tired and thirsty stopped at a farmhouse for a rest and a drink of water. As I sipped the cold, refreshing liquid the woman of the house, who had five children playing about her, was complaining of being overworked."

"I run this here whole farm," she said, in a tone which indicated that she was ready to resign.

"How many acres have you?" I inquired.

"A hundred and forty—20 in wheat, 60 in corn, 10 in meadow and pasture and the balance in woods."

"Got any stock?"

"Ten head of cattle, six hogs and work critters for the place."

"And you run the whole business?"

"Indeed I do; every hide and hair of it," she sighed.

"Don't you hire some help?"

"Oh, yes, but it ain't no help that takes the load off one's body."

"Haven't you got a husband?" I asked sympathetically.

"Yes," she responded, very slowly; "but I have to run him, too."

THE VERY OLDEST VESSEL.

Built in Philadelphia in 1764 and Probably Still in Service in England.

Speaking of the life of ships the other day, George F. Sprague, secretary of the board of port wardens, said about the oldest vessel he knows of is the True Love, which if she is afloat to-day is 149 years old, says the Philadelphia Record.

The True Love was built in this city in 1764, and though she was only 6 feet and eight inches long, and of 22 feet beam, she was the largest ship that had been in these waters up to that time. She sailed from this port in 1765, and did not return until 1873, when she was 109 years old. She came in with a load of erythrite from Iceland. Then she sailed again and was no longer heard of until discovered in 1890 in the Thames river, England, where she was in the service as a cargo barge.

There was a proposal among shipping men here to purchase her and bring her over as a relic of bygone days and honest workmanship, but it never came to anything.

American Archery.

The practice of archery as a pastime has been popular in England ever since the days of its greatest glory, when Robin Hood, the bold outlaw and master bowman, and his merry clan roamed through the glades and dens of the king's woods "where the game did most abound," as freebooters and troubleshooters of the realm. Of course, says Albert Rankin Clark, in Recreation, archery has never flourished in modern times with that vigor which is displayed when the bow held the supremacy among weapons of warfare, but it has yet, and always will have, many ardent promoters, and when the present popular instruments of recreation are but museum relics, the twang of the bowstring and the swift flight of the feathered shaft will still possess their fascination for the human race.

Maid and the Dispensary.

It is commonly supposed that the persons who use the public dispensaries cannot afford to pay a doctor. If the dispensary statistics are large then (it is thought) the number out of work is very great. This is not a fair inference. A large number of the patients of dispensaries are poor, but a large number are not. At Johns Hopkins hospital a story is told of a woman, who, after being treated, lingered in the dispensary. "Is there anything further, madam?" a young doctor asked. "Oh, no; I'm just waiting till they've treated my maid."—World's Work.

PARROT LIVES A CENTURY.

The Bird Could Talk as Well as a Man If Educated When It Was Young.

There is no doubt of the fact that the parrot is one of the longest lived of all animals. There is a well-authenticated case of a grown man who used to go to see a remarkable talking cockatoo which his grandmother had personally known when she was a little girl. So it is probably no fairy story that the bird sometimes survives for a century, inasmuch as actual knowledge of this particular fowl covered something like 70 years.

In the West Indies and elsewhere in the tropics parrots are commonly allowed to roam at will about house gardens and at meal times, when they hear the clatter of plates they will walk into the dining-room, climb on the backs of the chairs and insist upon their share of whatever there is to eat.

It seems odd, when one comes to think of it, that birds should be the only animals that can talk. There are other speaking birds besides parrots, of course, such as the crow, for example, but parrots are decidedly the most capable conversationalists. So excellent is the vocal organ with which a parrot is provided that if it only had the requisite brains it could talk almost as well as a man. Doubtless the most intelligent parrots are the best speakers, other things being equal, but as already suggested, no parrot, however clever can become a first-rate talker unless its education has been begun early in life.

LONG-DISTANCE APPLAUSE.

Handclapping Was Plainly Heard by Wireless Nearly Two Hundred Miles Away.

One hundred and eighty miles away resounded the thunderous applause accorded the concert given in the Pensacola navy yard recently. It was handclapping by wireless. The large wireless transmitter station is located near the bandstand, and at the end of a selection by the navy band the De Forest operators opened wide the large spark gap as well as the doors to the soundproof spark muffler and then, depressing the Morse key, sent forth a succession of long, loud dashes heard for blocks. This "low frequency" spark and its rattle, following upon the last notes of the music, resembled an outburst of applause from a vast concourse of clapping hands, out sevenfold louder than any ever heard before. The bandmaster, startled, amused and impressed, responded with the one snore of the evening. As it transpired afterward, the operator at the station at New Orleans heard this electrical enthusiasm precisely when it was given 180 miles away.

Brazil's Blue Butterflies.

The exceedingly high prices often asked and paid for butterflies are rendered possible by the extreme uncertainty of the market. There is no means of knowing how long a butterfly will remain a rarity. It may continue unique for a quarter of a century, or it may become common in the course of a few months. A case in point is that of a beautiful blue butterfly from Brazil. When the first specimens of this butterfly were sent to England some years ago they sold readily for $50 or more apiece. Since then, however, collectors have sent it home in numbers, and the price has fallen to a paltry 60 cents.

His Stock.

"I," said the orator, slapping his breast with his fist and tossing his head like the heavy villain in a 10-20-30 show, "come of a stock rooted deep in the soil."

"Evidently from hogs," sniffed an old farmer in the audience.—Kansas City Journal.

COUNTERFEIT TRADE MARK

Every Article Bearing American Stamp Is Tampered With in Manchuria.

One sort of "yellow peril" that American exporters have to deal with in the orient is very real, according to a report that has been received by the department of commerce and labor from one of its special agents, who has been investigating trade conditions in the far east, reports the Washington Star. The special agent says that Manchuria is the hotbed for counterfeit trade-marks, and that every commodity bearing an American trade-mark that comes into the orient should have the text of the mark printed also in Chinese characters, or at least an explanation of why these characters are added. Otherwise, the buyers are likely to fight shy of the real article under the impression that it is an imitation.

No charge is made as to the place of origin of the spurious trade-marks, but the vendors of the imitation article to keep on the windward side. They evidently know the law well enough will change one letter, for instance, in the name of an American brand of soap, condensed milk or toilet preparation, and sell a very inferior article on the strength of the reputation that has been made by the legitimate manufacturer. This not only cuts into the manufacturer's trade, but eventually kills the whole trade in the articles imitated. Of course, the imitators care little about this; what they are after being immediate profits.

But the mere fact that there are counterfeiters of this sort shows one source of trouble that the legitimate American manufacturer has to deal with in fighting for the trade of the orient, and it is hoped that some of the counterfeiters may be caught and discouraged a little in the inroads they are making into American commerce.
